

Starting the Portfolio

09/10/2026

Early in the morning, right after I woke up, I went straight to the table, opened my laptop, and immediately started coding this website. Making this site is honestly really hard because there are a lot of things I still have to figure out, especially the design, animations, and how everything should work together. I ran into several problems while building it, but I kept trying different solutions instead of giving up. Even though it was tiring and sometimes frustrating, I also enjoyed seeing the website slowly improve because it made me feel like all the effort was worth it.